BIO

Brandon Boyle is an actor based in Dublin and Kilkenny. He most recently appeared in the TV series 'Bloodline Detectives' and the feature film 'I Never Cry'. He works with the Stage and Screen Society, a community for theatre and film practitioners, in the United Arts Club in Dublin.

Brandon has done an acting workshop with Maureen Hughes, finished three courses in Bow Street Academy, and studied in New York Film Academy. He has also completed five of the Intensive Screen Acting Workshops featuring Diarmuid Goggins, Baz Black and William Morgan. The Kin scene featured on his profile was from this workshop and was also directed by Diarmuid.

Brandon is currently involved in a scene work group at the Stage and Screen Society, where he is filming and acting on a regular basis. He is also doing directing and acting coaching. You'll see him in the upcoming feature film 'House Ablaze', a story set during the Irish Civil War in 1921, directed by Seán O'Deadáigh.
